First to fight for the right, and to build the Nation's might,
And the Army goes rolling along.
Proud of all we have done, fighting till the battle's won,
And the Army goes rolling along.
Then it's hi! hi! hey! The Army's on its way.
Count off the cadence loud and strong; two, three, four, hut, two, three!
For where'er we go, you will always know
That the Army goes rolling along.

"Marine Corps Hymn" – Marines
From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli,
We will fight our country's battles in the air, on land and sea.
First, we fight for right and freedom, and to keep our honor clean.
We are proud to claim the title of United States Marines.

"Semper Paratus" – Coast Guard

A Special Veterans Sunday Welcome to Brooke & Bryce Hamilton, USAF

This Veterans Sunday, we are honored to welcome Brooke and Bryce Hamilton and thank them for sharing their time, experiences, and stories with us. Together, they represent more than four decades of dedicated service to our nation through distinguished careers in the United States Air Force.

Brooke and Bryce Hamilton each proudly served 22 years in the United States Air Force before retiring from military service. During her career, Brooke served as a paralegal, working on complex and high-visibility court-martial cases as part of the Air Force prosecution team. She later helped oversee the operations of multiple legal offices at the Numbered Air Force headquarters. Brooke holds a Master of Science in Management from Bellevue University and now works as a paralegal assisting individuals with Defense Base Act claims. She also serves part-time at Country Meadows Retirement Community in Leader Heights, creating meaningful opportunities for residents to connect, engage, and find purpose.

Bryce began his Air Force career as an aircraft maintainer, ensuring aircraft remained safe, reliable, and mission-ready before transitioning into Air Traffic Control. Throughout his military service, he deployed more than eight times in support of missions around the world, helping ensure the safe and efficient movement of military aircraft. Following retirement, he continued his career at Harley-Davidson Vehicle Operations in York, where he works in the Process Improvement Department, helping improve efficiency and workplace operations.

Brooke and Bryce reside in York County and are the proud parents of two sons, Tyler and Josh. We extend our sincere gratitude for their years of service, sacrifice, and continued commitment to their community. Please join us in welcoming Brooke and Bryce Hamilton and thanking them for being with us today.

Veterans Spotlight: Honoring Elvin Myers

Each year on Veterans Sunday, St. Peter's Lischey's UCC pauses to honor the brave men and women who have served, or are currently serving, in our nation's armed forces. Some are members of our congregation and community, many rest in our cemetery, and others are remembered on battlefields far from home. As part of this annual tribute, we recognize a member of our church family whose service reflects the values of duty, sacrifice, and commitment that we hold dear. This year, we are proud to honor Elvin Myers.

When Elvin Myers left Spring Grove as a young man in the fall of 1966, America was deeply involved in the Vietnam era, and military service was on the minds of many young people. Rather than wait to be drafted, Elvin made a thoughtful decision to enlist in the United States Army, believing it would give him greater control over his future. That choice marked the beginning of a three-year military journey that would challenge him, shape his character, and leave him with a lifelong sense of pride.

Born and raised in Spring Grove, Elvin grew up in a hardworking family. His father, Elmer Myers, worked at P.H. Glatfelter, owned a grocery store, and had served in the Navy during World War II. His mother, Hattie, helped run the family store and also worked as an ambulance dispatcher for Spring Grove. Service and responsibility were familiar values in the Myers household. While his father supported his decision to join the military, it was his sister, Deanna, who drove him to New Cumberland on the day he was inducted into the Army, beginning a chapter that would take him thousands of miles from home.

After graduating from Spring Grove High School in 1964 and attending York Junior College, Elvin enlisted in the Army and headed south for basic training at Fort Gordon, Georgia. He continued with Advanced Infantry Training at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, before attending Officer Candidate School at Fort Lee, Virginia. Although he ultimately chose not to complete Officer Candidate School, the experience taught him important lessons about discipline, attention to detail, and perseverance. He developed a deep respect for those leaders who had gained their experience through real-world military service, especially a first lieutenant who had served in Vietnam and earned Elvin's admiration through practical knowledge and leadership.

Elvin's sole duty assignment took him to Fort Wainwright, Alaska, a posting unlike anything he had ever experienced. As a supply specialist assigned to the 166th Ordnance Company, part of the 562nd Artillery Battalion, he supported the maintenance and readiness of Nike Hercules missile sites that formed part of the nation's northern defense system during the Cold War. Security was extremely tight, and every aspect of the operation reflected the seriousness of the mission. While many people might have been intimidated by the harsh conditions of Alaska, Elvin met the challenge head-on. The weather, rather than military life itself, proved to be his greatest obstacle. Temperatures routinely plunged far below zero, and he vividly recalls Winter Indoctrination Training, where soldiers learned Arctic survival skills. One particularly memorable night found him sleeping on the frozen ground in temperatures reaching thirty-six degrees below zero while a struggling Arctic stove provided little warmth. It was an experience he never forgot.

Despite the harsh environment, Elvin found opportunities to excel. Rather than simply follow the familiar military advice of "never volunteer," he carefully evaluated opportunities and volunteered when he saw a chance to learn and contribute. One such opportunity involved preparing detailed quarterly readiness reports that were sent to the Pentagon. The assignment gave him unique responsibilities and the chance to work closely with leadership. As part of the job, he traveled around the installation collecting information for the quarterly reports and was even allowed to use the Company Commander's Ford Mustang to get around base, a perk that certainly made the assignment memorable.

His willingness to step forward paid dividends. Elvin competed for Battalion Soldier of the Month and won. The following year, he not only repeated that accomplishment but went on to earn Post Soldier of the Month honors as well. His initiative, dedication, and strong performance were recognized through rapid promotions. Rising from Private First Class to Specialist Fourth Class and then to Sergeant (E-5) in less than three years was an impressive achievement and a testament to his abilities.

One of the more humorous lessons from Elvin's military service came during prisoner-of-war training in the mountains of Virginia. The soldiers, acting as prisoners, were tied together by the wrists, with Elvin at the front of the line linked directly to the instructor portraying their captor. Elvin was in the best shape of his life, so feeling energetic and perhaps a little too confident, he repeatedly called out, "Can't you go any faster? Can't you go any faster?" The instructor's response was swift and unforgettable. He stopped the entire line and ordered everyone to sit down in a large mud puddle. Looking back, Elvin admits that his constant urging may have been just a little annoying. Unfortunately for his fellow prisoners, being tied together meant they all shared the consequences of his impatience. It was a lesson he never forgot and a reminder that military instructors had a unique talent for making sure their lessons stuck.

His time in Alaska also demonstrated his determination and resourcefulness. Realizing that completing his tour at Fort Wainwright would still leave him eligible for reassignment elsewhere, possibly including Vietnam, he requested an extension. When his initial request drew a blunt response from his battalion commander, Lieutenant Colonel Samuels, Elvin rewrote the letter with complete honesty. The extension was approved, allowing him to complete his service and return home directly from Alaska.

As memorable as his military career had been, perhaps nothing was more unforgettable than the night before his discharge. While playing cards in a recreational facility near the barracks, Elvin suddenly found himself staring down the barrel of a .45-caliber pistol wielded by an agitated soldier who was involved in a dispute unrelated to him. Even so, being directly in the weapon's path was unsettling. Thinking, "Great, I'm going to get shot the night before I go home," Elvin calmly slid beneath the table as shots rang out. Fortunately, no one was hurt, and the gunman was later apprehended. It was a dramatic conclusion to his military service and one that underscored the unpredictability of Army life.

The next day, Elvin began the long journey home from Alaska. Along the way, he encountered a Marine sergeant who had recently survived being shot down in a helicopter in Vietnam. During a turbulent flight, Elvin offered reassurance to the visibly shaken Marine, demonstrating the understanding and compassion that veterans often share with one another.

Back in Spring Grove, Elvin resumed civilian life, returned to York College, and married within a year and a half. While the demands of building a family ultimately led him to set aside his pursuit of a college degree, the GI Bill helped support his educational goals. More importantly, the Army had given him something lasting: greater maturity, self-confidence, and a deep sense of accomplishment that would serve him well throughout his life.

Over the years, Elvin built a successful career at Glatfelter Paper, where he worked for 36 years before retiring in 2011. He is the proud father of a daughter and a son, each of whom has a son and a daughter of their own. Together, they have blessed him with four grandchildren, two grandsons and two granddaughters. Today, two of his grandchildren are attending college, while two are students in the West York School District. For the past 23 years, he has been joined by his life partner, Diane, whose companionship and support have been an important part of his journey.

Today, Elvin remains proud of his service. He believes military service instilled personal pride and broadened his understanding of the world. He reminds others that veterans are individuals who deserve to be judged by their character rather than assumptions about their service. His message to future generations is simple and sincere: "Don't be afraid to serve."

Looking back, Elvin Myers' story is one of steady leadership, practical wisdom, and quiet courage. From the frozen landscapes of Alaska to the responsibilities of national defense, he answered his country's call with dedication and determination. His journey stands as a reminder that service is not only about where one goes or what one accomplishes, but about the character that is forged along the way.

That same spirit of service continues to shape Elvin's life today. He remains active at St. Peter's Lischey's, where he currently serves on the cemetery board. He is also an active member of the Spring Grove Lions Club and faithfully helps place flags on veterans' graves each Memorial Day, ensuring that the sacrifices of others are not forgotten.

Elvin, we thank you for your years of service to our country and your steadfast dedication to your family and community. You are a cherished part of the long tradition of service and sacrifice embodied by the members of St. Peter's Lischey's UCC.
